

Project management for Ridder iQ

Project management work is complex. It requires continuous coordination between engineering, procurement, production, and available resources. If this process doesn't run smoothly, it quickly leads to inefficiency and errors. And thus, it results in cost and schedule overruns. With project management for Ridder iQ, you maintain control.

With Project Management, you manage and control all projects comprehensively. The module brings peace, overview, and control from sales and production to delivery. Project management is an integral part of your entire Ridder iQ system. That is a significant advantage over traditional ERP systems without an integrated project module.

In this module, production, assembly, budget monitoring, production planning, and project planning are fully aligned with each other. The module provides real-time information, ensuring that you always have the most up-to-date data.

Central overview with Work Breakdown Structure

In one central overview, you see the total structure of the project and monitor its progress. For each phase, budget, (partial) order, or task, both the completion of work, material status, and (expected) costs are visible.

Gain real-time insight into the financial key figures of all your ongoing projects.

Manage all CRM activities

In Ridder iQ Project Management, you can manage all CRM activities, such as emails, phone calls, appointments, tasks, and documents from the sales phase. In this phase, it is possible to make rough margin calculations. CRM, quotation management, order management, and task management are fully integrated into this module. In combination with the integrated Ridder iQ Project Planning module, you have early visibility into the impact of the potential project on the available resources and therefore, on the order flow.

Monitor milestones and assign responsibilities

Within the project management module, it is possible to create and manage milestones at every level, within each project. You can assign employees responsible for crucial agreements with customers and other stakeholders to these milestones. You can also link payment terms to these milestones. In short: nothing escapes your attention.

Real-time insight into financial key figures

With Ridder iQ Project Management, you have real-time insight into the financial key figures of a project. At any moment, you can freeze a project and generate progress calculations. This way, you monitor both the current progress and the expectation. This can be done in two ways: based on the theoretical progress that the package continuously updates or through manual progress determined by the project manager. Each calculation is saved in the database, which is extremely useful for comparing calculations. This provides you with a progressive understanding of your projects.
